General Description of the Parkeville Hydropathic Institute. The main building is three stories high, standing back from the street about one humbred feet, with a semicircular grass plot in front, and contains thirty to forty rooms. The grounds around the house-are tastefully laid out with walks and planted with trees, shynds, &c. On the left of the entrance to these grounds is a cottage containing four rooms, used by male patients as a bathing house, with every convenience for "packing," bathing, &c.; on the right of the entrance, about two hundred feet distant, stands a similar cottage, used by the ladies for similar purposes.

stands a similar cottages, used by the lattes for similar purposes.

In the rear of the Institute, at the distance of one hundred feet, are three other cottages, some eighty feet apart. One of these is the laundry, with a hydrant at the door; the other two are occupied by the servants.

The hydrant water is introduced into these cottages as well as into the main building, and all the waste water carried off by drains under ground.

THE WAYER WORKS

Consist of a circular stone building, standing on the brow of a hill, surmounded by a large codar reservoir containing five hundred barrels, brought from a never-failing spring of pure cold water in the side of the fill, by "a hydraulic rann," a self-acting machine of cast iron, that is kept conof pure cold water in the side of the fill, by "a hydraulic ram," a solf-acting machine of cast from that is kept constantly going, night and day, by the descent of the water from the epring. The surplus water is carried from the reservoir to a fountain in the water-works yard, surrounded by weeping willows. In the first story of the water-works is a circular room, containing the douche bath, which is a stream falling from a height of about thirty foot, and can be varied in size from half an inch to an inch and a half in diameter. Adjoining the douche room is a dressing room, with marble tables, &c.; the rising douche (for the cure of piles, &c.) is one of the most complete contrivances of the kind, being entirely under the control of the patient using the same.

There are many other appliances, which can be better understood by a personal examination.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF CHINA AND INDIA; with a descriptive account of those countries and their minabitants, from the earliest period of authentic history to the present time. In which the editor has treated not only of the historical events, but also of the manners, ustoms, religion, literature, and domestic habits of the ceople of those immense empires.

The emballishments are about two hundred, and of the irst order, illustrating whatever is peculiar to the inhabiants, regarding their dress, domestic occupations, their mode of agriculture, commercial pursuits, arts, &c. They are accurate, and each one has been made expressly for the work.

The volume forms a large octave, containing between

THRILLING INCIDENTS OF THE WARS OF THE UNITED STATES;

comprising the most striking and remarkable events of the Revolution, the French war, the Tripolitan war, the findian war, the second war with Great Britain, and the Mexican war; with three hundred engravings! Retail price, $2 60 per volume. Orders respectfully solicited.

SEARS PICTORIAL FAMILY PUBLICATIONS are decidedly the best books that agents can possibly employ their time in supplying to the people of the United States. They are valuable for reference, and should be possessed by every family in this great republic. There is not a city or town in these United States, not even those of small importance, but contains many citizens to whom these works are indispensable. They are adapted to the literary wants of the Christian, the patriot, the statesman, and the domestic circle, got up in a superior style of art and workmanship; and are not only such books as will sell, but are such as an agent of good principle will feel free to recommend, and willing to see the purchaser again after they have been bought.

Our Plan.—The plan the publisher has so successfully carried out for several years, is the obtaining responsible ten as agents, who are well known in their own counties, owns, and villages, and have time and disposition to circulate good and instructive books among their neighbors and friends. Any person wishing to whark in the enterprise will risk little in sending $25 or $50, for which he will receive an assortment as he may direct, at the whole sale cash prices.

THE EVILS OF GAMBLING. LETTER BY A LADY.

The following letter from a young lady of about nineteen years of age is extremely touching, as well as evincive of high talent. It is a sister's plea to a beloved brother against the vice of gambling. This vice has many votaries, and there are unhappily many sisters who, if they could plead as eloquently as this one, have occasion for the employment of such an appeal.

The authorship of the letter is known to the writer of this, and probably to not more than three or four other persons in the wide world. The letter has all the advantage of being written in the fullness of the heart and with a true sisterly affection. It would be entirely improper to publish the names, or to give a clue to the names by leaving in full certain passages. Except the writer of this, none but the nearest relatives of the young man to whom the letter was addressed can know its origin. May many a young man feel that such an appeal against this destructive vice is that which many a guage and argument displayed by the sister who penned this letter. And may many a brother take heed therefrom and reform .- Eps.

MY DEAR BROTHER: What my sensations were to-day, on reading a letter written by you to father, it is impossible for me to describe, but it is my sincere wish that such may never be yours. Oh, my dear brother, how could you, who know your father so well, inflict a pang on his sensitive, feeling heart! Pardon me this one reproach—it is neither my wish nor intention to reproach—conscious that your own feelings must reproach you sufficiently, when you hear how your father was affected by your conduct. When the letters came in this morning, he, after reading yours, threw it on the floo beside me, saying, "There, Mary, you have lost your brother." I looked up, and never, no, never shall I forget the expression of his coun-tenance at that moment; and without saying another word he went into the adjoining room, where he continued walking about for some time. His words had left me without the power of asking your fate, or reading the letter which lay beside me, when ma, picking it up, and seeing it came from you, said that you were not dead; then it was my full heart found rehave been a witness of the scene that followed, it would have been a lesson that would have lasted you your lifetime. I saw your father's face bathed in tears—tears which flowed for the follies of a son he almost idolized. "Mary," cried he, "if you or Joseph ever cause me to shed such tears it will break my heart." He then bade me write to you and tell you, that if you would return home he would give you an equal share with the rest of the children of his your situation-in a foreign land, far from relations and friends, unknown to a single soul who is in the least interested about you. Re-turn, my dear brother, to the fostering arms of your parents and friends, who are willing and anxious to serve you, if you will hereafter fol-low their advice and never more engage in that bane and scourge to society, gambling. What will not be the pleasing consequences of resist-ing this will? The love and esteem of all who done your duty. Your days will pass in peacebe sweet, and undisturbed but by dreams of bliss, and you will rise in the morning with a heart as light as a feather; for the money that So much for Delaware newspapers. you would squander away at play in one night, spent in benevolence, might procure you the blessing and prayers of many an unfortunate, but worthy and deserving family. On the other hand, what is not to be expected if you still indulge in that despicable vice! You will ruin your fortune, lose your character, grieve your friends, and, perhaps, to drive care away and

THE PRESIDENT'S PROGRESS.

A Patriotic Poem.

BY PLUTARCH PUFFER.

PART 1st.—Showing how and with whom His Excellency act out for the Old Dominion.

A Control of drink forget what you have been and what you now are; while, instead of the esteem and friendship of all who know you, the finger of pity and scorn will be pointed by all who see you. Can my brother ever forget what he owes to his family, to society, and to himself, so far as to be the wretch I have described to No.! forbid it, Heaven! It would break his far-No! forbid it, Heaven! It would break his fa-ther's heart. I blush to think that I could for ther's heart. I blush to think that I could for one moment, though but a mement, entertain such an opinion of you. Have you not promised to try and be the character I painted first? Yes, you have, and I will believe you; but do not trust too much to yourself, dear brother; what can frail man do? Nothing without the aid of the Omnipotent hand. Look to and beseech your all-protecting Father to aid and strengthen you in your resolves to do better, for without His aid you can do nothing, but with it you can do everything you wish.

His aid you can do nothing, but with it you can do everything you wish.

Where are now all those visions of pleasure which my fancy was so fond of creating; gone, flown in a moment! There has not been a week, nay, hardly a day for the last three months, that my busy imagination has not formed plans of pleasure to be enjoyed with my brother this coming spring. I was all anxiety to have my piano new tuned, before your return, (as the return of the —— was daily expected.) I have practised pieces that I thought would please you, over and over again, so that I might play them perfectly; my handsomest pieces of painting and embroidery were carefully laid up to show you, as I valued the praises of my brother more than that of twenty indifferent spectators. How disappointed! But as I have hope to live upon, I will try and rest satisfied.

and rest satisfied. and rest satisfied.

It will be two years, this coming spring, since I left school, and in a few weeks after my arrival home, father removed his family to where we now live. I spent last fall and winter with grandmother and my relations in _____, and was very much pleased with my visit. Innumerable were the inquiries made after you, by both relatives and acquaintances, and every one seemed anxious to tell some little anecdote which happened during your residence among them

Your little brothers, —, on hearing that I was writing to you, were all anxiety to know if I would put their names in my letter, with a great deal of love to you. Whenever there is a letter from you, as soon as they hear of it, in they run to inquire about you, and the first question they always ask is when is brother — coming home. - coming home.

Brother is very much grown: he is now as tall as father, though not near as corpulent. He, with your other brothers, join me in love to you, and in entreaties that you will come home. Can you, my brother, resist the cutreaties of your father, your sister and bro-thers, to return and enjoy their love and protection, when you are exposed to all the ills of poverty, and without a friend to sympathize in your grief, or participate in your joys. I shudder when I think of the length of time that has clapsed since the date of your letter; what might you not have suffered in five months? Alas! I dare not think of it. Do no tender recollections of your sister now and then cross your mind? Has distance, in so short a time, weahed you from those who love you so well, so tenderly? * * * But I must close; my paper, my fire and candle are all giving out;

paper, my fire and candle are all giving out; it is very late in the night, and I am so cold I can hardly hold my pen, and so sleepy I can hardly keep my eyes open. * * * * May the Lord protect and guard you from every temptation and vice! May angels hover over your pillow at night, lead you safely through the thorny paths of life during the day, and take you to everlasting bliss hereafter—ever was and ever will be the earnest prayer of her who will never cease to love you prayer of her who will never cease to love you with the sincerest sisterly affection.

(Communicated.) The Derrick Accident.

MESSES. EDITORS: In your very valuable paper of this evening, in noticing the breaking of the derrick in attempting to raise a heavy piece of stone at Todd's new building. under the head of "A Caution," you say : "We would recommend greater caution than is practised in these matters."

Now, Messrs. Editors, I will venture the assertion, that there never was a building of the same size taken down and put up in this city with more "caution" and less accident than the one in question. And too much praise cannot be attributed to Mr. E. French, under whose superintendence the old building was removed (and under whom the marble part of the new one is now being erected,) for his "caution" and judgment in protecting the lives and limbs of those he had under him. The fact is, Messrs. Editors, that from the time the workmen first commenced taking down Mr. Tood's old building to the present, there has not an accident occurred to any one which caused the loss of a day's time; and though it may not "go up" quite as fast as some others, yet the public may lief in tears. Oh, my dear brother! could you rest assured that it will be well done under the superintendence of the following skilful Washington mechanics : Messrs. Jerome Diggs, brick layer; A. Baidwin & Son, Carpenters; E. French, marble setter; T. M. O'Brien, marble fitter; Brown & Siousi, plasterers; and Wilson & Heyward, painters.

Yours, respectfully,

WASHINGTON, September 18, 1851.

MR. COOPER'S LAST MOMENTS .- A writer in the Albany Evening Journal, as follows, gives the particulars of the last moments of Mr.

"Cooperstown, Sept. 14, p. m.-James Feni-more Cooper breathed his last at one o'clock to-day. He expired free from pain, and his last moments were cheerful and happy. He had been confined about one week. Mr. Cooper became a member of the Episcopal church in this village early last spring, and was constant in his attendance and at the communion, until bodily weakness confined him to his house. During his sickness he evipced the utmost patience, submission, and composure of mind. He has been visited daily most of this time by his pastor, Rev. Mr. Batten, who spent several hours each day at his bedside in prayer and conversation with him. He was entirely pre-pared for the event. Had Mr. Cooper lived until to-morrow he would have been sixty-two years of age. In his death a great man has fallen. The village has lost one of its most worthy and benevolent citizens, and the Episcopal church a liberal and strong support.

CURIOUS FREAK OF A CRAZY WOMAN .- Officer Phipps was called, early yesterday morning, by the sexton of St. Mary's church, to take a woman named Mrs. Haggerty down from the belfry. She was discovered by the sexton, who, upon trying to ring the bell, found it would not go. He then ascended to the tower, and found the woman clinging to the tongue of the bell. She refused to let go her hold and come down, and it was only by the exercise of much persuasion nd some force, that she was induced to abandon her exalted position. It is supposed that she had been there two days and one night, as she had been missed during that time. [Troy (N. Y.) Times.

The growth of some of the cities of England during the last fifty years has exceeded that of some of the most flourishing American cities. This is the case with Liverpool. In 1801 its population did not amount to 100,000; it is now over 500,000. This is the largest increase of any town or city of the British empire. The progress of this town for some 500 years was very slow. From the granting of the charter of King John, in the year 1209, to the year 1760, a period of very nearly 500 years, the population of Liverpool slowly crept up from 200 or 300 to 8,000 inhabitants; during the next one hundred years, to the census of t increased, at an accelerated speed, to 90,239; and during the last fifty years it has increased, in a rapidly augmenting ratio, to 500,000. It was never increasing at so great a speed as at present; and, supposing that ratio of increase to continue, it will amount to 1,000,000 inhabitants at the close of the present century.
